Klint Rudolph

Xcite Media Group, LLC

Klint Rudolph is a founding partner of The Xcite

Group, a digital advertising agency based in Denver.

The Xcite Group is a Google certified, full-service, digital marketing agency. Digital Marketing is an industry that is constantly evolving. It is both art and science. Xcite strives to stay on the front end of this evolution and keep their clients not only ahead of their competitors but also ahead of their consumers.

Xcite takes a holistic look at all available data and pays close attention to consumer behaviors in today's multi-device, always connected world in order to help keep their client's website and company in front of their audience when they need them.

With a background in theater, stage performance and as a lead singer in a rock band, Klint is more than just a computer geek. Klint is digital marketing strategist who speaks nationally on radio shows and conferences. Klint has also presented in Mountain View, California at Google Headquarters educating Agencies around the world on agency best practices.

Klint has an advertising background that started in the "Yellow Pages" industry and when he and his partners realized the opportunity to help businesses be more efficient and effective in their strategy, they formed Xcite. Following Google like a lost puppy, he travels to the Google campus in Mt. View CA, on a regular basis. By following the leadership style and culture modeled by Google, he has a prospering Google Partner Agency that ranks in the top 10% nationally and has won multiple awards including Top Digital Marketing Agencies 2015 and Top Web Design Firms 2016. By keeping up with the pace of business success stories online, Klint can demonstrate the growth potential that is truly possible using the internet to it's highest potential.
